HAMILTON POSSE KILLS MAN IN SEARCH FOR MISSING MURDERER

Shoot Alleged Still Operator In Flight; Hold Companion

HAMILTON, O., May 29.—Bradley Jones, 40, was shot to death at Shandon, near here, during the night, when a posse of fourteen men descended on the secluded cabin in which he and a companion lived.

The second man, C. A. Kouba, was captured after a chase during which he sought refuge at the home of a neighbor.

The killing occurred while Sheriff Luther Epperson and the posse were searching for Joseph Zwick who was believed to have been with Joseph Jacobs when the latter was slain by gangsters near here Monday night.

Zwick, believed seriously wounded, made his way to Middletown from where friends took him to Columbus, according to police.

As the posse descended on the cabin last night Jones and Kouba heard their approach and fled. They were ordered to halt and when they refused the posse began firing.

Bradley was described today as a distillery operator.

Sheriff Epperson and his posse went to Shandon in the belief that Zwick was in hiding there.

Zwick is wanted in connection with the murder of Peter Dumele, marshal of North College Hill, and Robert Andres, a witness in the Dumele case who was slain on the eve of his appearance as a witness.

Andres was to have testified at the trial of Rodney Ford of Middletown and Cincinnati, who was condemned to death for the marshal's murder.

Police today still were without any clues to the identity of the gunman who assassinated Jacobs with a machine gun.

The killing of Jacobs followed the murder of George Murphy, former hotel clerk who was ambushed in an alley here and riddled with machine gun bullets.

Officers believe rival rum-running, hijacking of blackmailing gangs inspired the killings although thus far there has been nothing to substantiate their belief.

As police took up the trail of the man believed to be Zwick they also began search for a woman known as "Dago Rose" who, they assert, took Zwick to Middletown yesterday.

At Middletown, police declare, Zwick was met by associates who rushed him to Columbus, possibly for medical attention.

Jacobs and his companion (believed to have been Zwick) were riding in a small coupe when a big curtained touring car forced the machine to the side of the road.

A second later the coupe was riddled by machine gun bullets.

Investigators said Kouba would be questioned today with the possibility that he might be able to throw light on the murderers.

VICTIM IN CLINIC WRITES TO HEROES

CLEVELAND, May 29.—Miss Sue Brantweiner, 19, injured in the clinic disaster, had her attendants prop her up in her bed at Mt. Sinai Hospital in order that she might write two notes to her heroes.

One hero, like herself, was in the same institution, well on the road to recovery. The other was dead.

Her note to Fireman George Jusko, who carried out many victims before the poisonous gas affected him, read:

"Dear Fireman: You are so brave! With best wishes, Sue Brantweiner."

Commenting on her note to the fireman Miss Brantweiner said:

"Those firemen were so wonderful. They didn't have to dash into that building to save us and risk their own lives. Oh, I think they were marvelous."

But Sue spoke on her other hero with a tear in her eye and a choking feeling in her throat. William Brownlow, a clinic artist, with his bare hand broke a window pane on the third floor and held her in the window till she was reached by firemen on a ladder.

"Brownlow saved my life. I thought if I wrote a poem in his memory it would help a little to show my appreciation for what he did for me," and Sue choked back a sob.

BOOTLEGGER HELD

CINCINNATI, O., May 29.—H. D. Currey, 40, was arraigned before the U. S. Commissioner today, charged with violating the prohibition laws. Currey was arrested by William E. Barcus, ace of the federal dry force here after Barcus trapped him into delivering a half-case of whiskey. Barcus said Currey was the "chief source of supply" for Cincinnati hotel guests.

EXPECT EARLY SETTLEMENT OF REPARATIONS PLAN PROBLEMS

PARIS, May 29.—The new schedule of annuities which Germany will be required to pay under the Owen D. Young plan, as effective next September was completed today by the technical experts of the reparations conference.

The new schedule was being submitted to the various delegations for consideration by the creditor nations.

Meanwhile, with hope of a compromise settlement high, it became apparent that the delegations expected the long negotiations to end momentarily. The Americans have engaged passage for New York on steamers leaving Saturday and next Wednesday.

Thomas W. Lamont hopes to sail on the steamer France and J. P. Morgan probably will board the same vessel. Young, as chairman of the conference, may have to remain here to sign the agreement.

The creditor nations hoped that Germany and Belgium would work out separately a solution of Belgium's claim for the deflation of her currency during the war, making a solution of the general problem easier.

GARY ADMITS USING YOUNG GIRL DECOYS FOR LIQUOR CASES

Believe Inspector Under Fire Once Worked
Here

COLUMBUS, O., May 29.—Another investigation in the state prohibition department was believed in prospect today as the result of the reported use of girls as decoys by state prohibition inspectors operating in Lawrence and Scioto Counties.

State Inspector Fred E. Gary, testifying at a hearing against an alleged liquor law violator, admitted that he and W. A. Ellsworth, a former state agent, had taken two ironing girls to places in Scioto and Lawrence Counties to obtain evidence against suspected bootleggers, according to news dispatches.

Gary is reported to have testified that he did not know the names of the girls. They accompanied the two dry agents, according to his testimony, without knowing they were decoys. The officers, Gary is reported to have stated, "pretended they were out for a party."

State prohibition Commissioner Rupert R. Beetham is out of the city, but it was stated at the department that he would investigate the reports upon his return here. Deputy Commissioner Sam K. Beetham said he knew nothing about the case and that no reports had been made concerning Gary's use of girls as decoys.

Local officials believe Gary is the same Fred E. Gary who worked as an undercover investigator for the prosecutor's office here several years ago in liquor cases. He came into the limelight here because of testimony in a number of gambling cases.

WISCONSIN'S DRY DEPARTMENT AT END

MADISON, Wis., May 29.—Wisconsin's state prohibition law and the department which was set up to enforce it were abolished today when Gov. Fred J. Kohler signed the repealer bill introduced by Assemblyman John W. Grobschmidt of Milwaukee.

The legislature passed the measure after a state-wide referendum in which the voters approved repeal of the state dry law by a majority of 142,000.

Governor Kohler, the man who invented colored bathroom fixtures, had approved President Hoover's prohibition enforcement policies, leading many to believe that he would feel bound to veto the Grobschmidt bill.

Today, however, he announced that he had affixed his signature to the measure and that state prohibition in Wisconsin had been abolished.

WOMEN ORGANIZE TO ASK MODIFICATION OF PROHIBITION ACT

Mrs. Charles Sabin
Heads Opposition
To Dry Law

CHICAGO, May 29.—A nation wide organization of women who favor temperance but who are opposed to prohibition has been formed here to aid in moulding public opinion for modification of the prohibition laws.

Only the skeleton of the organization was formed at the meeting yesterday. A list of women interested in the movement, however, showed that the organization has social, political and civic leaders representing twenty-six states in the union.

Mrs. Sabin was chosen as temporary chairman of the organization which will be known as the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform.

In a statement to the press, Mrs. Sabin made clear the aims of the organization.

Primarily, she said, the movement has resulted from a questionnaire sent out three years ago by the Women's National Republican Club.

The questionnaire was sent to over 3,000 women in all parts of the nation," Mrs. Sabin said. "The results were astonishing. Nine to one, the women favored changes in dry legislation."

"This meeting here results from agitation of long standing. Women are not satisfied with the results of prohibition. We feel that it long has been necessary that some action be taken to counteract the results of the Volstead act. This is the action, formation of a nationwide unit."

"Next fall we will hold a national convention and at that time we expect to outline policies, decide our plans of action and start an active campaign."

She said it was probable the organization would seek modification of the law.

A number of women prominent in Chicago social and club circles have indicated approval of the movement. Several were present at the meeting.

A statement issued by the women declared that after ten years, of national prohibition, the women of the nation are beginning to realize the deplorable effects of the operation of the law on their country and children."

FLYER STILL ALOFT IN ENDURANCE TRY

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 29.—Lieut. Herbert Fahy completed a full day in the air as he circled over southern California today in his effort to establish a new solo endurance flight record.

Fahy went up yesterday morning on his second try to break the record of thirty-four hours and fifty-nine minutes held by Martin Jensen. An attempt several days ago ended after twenty-four hours because of fog.

Meantime, a woman flier, Miss Marvel Crosson, made a claim for the altitude record for women. Miss Crosson landed yesterday at 20,000 feet. The barograph of her plane has been sent to Washington for official checking.

The altitude record is 20,270 feet held by Mrs. Louise McNettridge Thaden of Oakland.

Wives of Flyers

More than anyone else these two women hoped for the success of the endurance flight of the monoplane, Forth Worth, at Fort Worth, Tex. They are Mrs. James Kelley, top, and Mrs. Reg Robbins, wives of the pilots. From time to time they went aloft to wave greetings to their mates.

HOUSE PASSES NEW TARIFF BILL; NOW UP BEFORE SENATE

Few Amendments Are Made To Hoover Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The administration's new tariff bill, passed in the house yesterday by a vote of 264 to 147, was sent to the senate today by Speaker Longworth.

Republican party unity forced the measure through with adoption of fewer than 150 amendments, all sponsored by the ways and means committee. This was in line with President Hoover's requests for a limited number of rate schedule changes.

Twelve Democrats supported the bill while a handful of Republicans opposed its passage.

In the senate debate is expected to center on rates on cement, taken from the free list and given a duty of eight cents a 100 pounds; duties, also taken from the free list and levied a tariff of 10 per cent ad valorem; and plate glass which was given an upward boost.

Other controversial items in the measure include sugar, which passed the house with a five cent a pound rate with a preferential duty of 2.40 cents per pound for Cuban imports; boots and shoes which which given a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem; leathers, which were given a duty of 20 1/2 per cent to 30 per cent ad valorem; and lumber, bricks, shingles, live cattle, tapoca, onions, canned tomatoes, pottery and textiles.

The bill may meet difficulties in the senate if it did not encounter in the house, where under the rules, administration leaders forced a closure program which limited debate to committee amendments. The more liberal senate rules will allow unlimited discussion.

BILL TO ABOLISH SECRECY UP SOON

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Early consideration will be granted to the senate to the rules committee recommendation for abolition of the 150 year old rule whereby presidential nominations are considered in secret, leaders agreed today.

As drawn by the committee the new rule would provide that the senate could consider nominations in public whenever a majority decides it is best to do so. The present rule requires two-thirds for open sessions. The new rule would automatically make public all roll calls taken in executive session.

The present rule requires a two-thirds majority for publication.

No further action is expected to be taken by the rules committee in investigating the source of the secret roll calls carried by the United Press upon confirmation of former Secretary of Interior Roy O. West and United States Customs Judge Irvine L. Lenroot.

LINDBERGH ENJOY HONEYMOON FREE OF PRYING REPORTERS

Newlyweds E v a d e
Scribes; Family Not Even Told

NEW YORK, May 29.—All that the world knew about the Charles A. Lindberghs today was that the couple was having a honeymoon in the western hemisphere, probably east of the Allegheny mountains and north of the Mason-Dixon line.

Nobody who was willing to give out information was even sure about that. The only persons who might be expected to know—the members of the bride's family—professed to be as mystified as the press and public.

Meanwhile, another crop of rumors was harvested, yielding much chaff and almost no grain. Unverified reports had it that the flier and Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Spencer Morrow, might be at any one of the following places:

Englewood, N. J., where they were married Monday and where they were reported to have gone shopping yesterday afternoon.

Enroute to North Haven, Me., to spend their honeymoon at the Morrow summer home. Plane, rail and water were mentioned as possible methods of transportation.

Aboard S. R. Guggenheim's yacht Telluride.

Aboard J. P. Morgan's yacht Corsair.

At a Newark residential hotel.

At the Guggenheim estate, Sea Cliff, Long Island.

Most of the rumors were investigated without result, and the situation became more complex when Mrs. Morrow's secretary issued the following statement at Englewood:

"We have not the slightest idea where Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh have gone on their honeymoon. When they left the house here in Englewood they departed without telling us where they were going. And we are as much in the dark as to where they are as is the public."

Lindbergh's Falcon biplane was taken for three flights yesterday, but on none of them was the owner at the controls. First the plane left Roosevelt Field, flew around for a while and finally was brought back to the field by William Crosswell and Russell Brown, of the Curtis Aeroplane Company. Later Crosswell and Brown took the plane to the Curtiss airport at Valley Stream, Long Island. There Randy Enslow, a friend of Lindbergh and Peter Stevenson, student pilot, took over the plane and flew it to Schenectady, N. Y.

The only definite piece of news connected with the wedding was the filing at Englewood yesterday of the marriage license. It was deposited with board of health officials by C. W. Hulst, attorney for the Morrow family, and revealed that application for the license was made by Lindbergh May 17. It was issued by John A. Manson, registrar, who went to the Morrow home by special request.

The license set forth that Lindbergh was 27 years old, the son of Charles A. and Evangeline Land Lindbergh. His occupation was given as "aeronautical consultant" and his home at St. Louis.

The bride was described as Anne Spencer Morrow, 22, daughter of Dwight W. and Elizabeth Cotter Morrow.

Elizabeth Morrow and Jay J. Morrow, sister and uncle of the bride, signed as witnesses.

CRIME COMMISSION PLACES CHICAGO GANGLAND "ON SPOT"

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Chicago's gangland is to go under the microscope of President Hoover's national law enforcement commission.

Under this program Chicago's long history of super-racket is to be examined, not only in quest of the peculiar local circumstances which have encouraged gang operations, but in search also of the legal formula for combating highly organized racketeering.

Chicago, with her abundant historical material and her bullet-scarred memorials of the nation's most sensational encounters between rival leaders, is to be the figurative laboratory case when the sub-head "gangs and their operations" is reached on the commission's agenda.

A sub-committee may be appointed to conduct this phase of the inquiry.

The commission took up its task today pledged to a searching investigation of every aspect of law enforcement and the nation's growing disrespect for laws of whatever nature. They are launched with the prayerful support of President Hoover and the fullest co-operation of the department of justice.

"No nation can long survive the failure of its citizens to respect and obey the laws which they make themselves," said President Hoover in formally inducting the commission into charging the commission with its task.

FRENCHMEN RETURN BECAUSE MAIN TANK DEVELOPS GAS LEAK

American Plane Is Stuck
In Sand On Attempt To Start

OLD ORCHARD, Me., May 29.—The French monoplane Yellow Bird returned to the beach here and landed at 9:16 a. m. EST after starting on her flight to Paris.

Meanwhile the American monoplane Green Flash remained on the beach. In an attempted take off on its projected flight to Rome prior to the Yellow Bird's hop, the Green Flash became stuck in the soft sand and its right wing dipped against the beach.

Pilot Jean Assolant of the Yellow Bird explained that after a few minutes of flying a small leak had been discovered in the main gasoline tank.

Assolant believed the tank leak itself was not serious, but he said in the long run it might have proved the difference between success and failure of their flight.

The French fliers indicated that several hours would be required to repair the leak, and because of tide conditions this seemed to indicate the Yellow Bird would not be able to start its flight today.

Meanwhile mechanics examined the Green Flash to ascertain if it had been damaged when stuck in the soft sand on its false start.

It was reported the right wing, which had dipped against the sand, had not been harmed. Efforts were being made to determine whether the right wheel had been damaged.

Assolant announced definitely that he and his flying companions would make no new attempt to take off today. A delay of four or five days in the start of their hop seemed possible because of a change in tide conditions today which will make an early morning take-off difficult.

At the time the leak was discovered, the Yellow Bird was over Portland Light, about ten miles out. Before turning back, the Frenchmen dumped all of the 1100-gallon fuel supply except enough for the short return flight.

With their plane lightened to this extent, they made a perfect landing near the Jones Hangar. Shortly afterward, the Yellow Bird was hauled back onto the plank in front of the hangar, where it had rested for several days prior to the false start.

The French crew was plainly disappointed and agitated by the trick of fate which forced them to come back after getting away to a splendid start.

The Yellow Bird soared off the sands at 8:55 a. m. (E. S. T.). The Frenchmen in the cockpit drove their craft out along the path Lindbergh opened to Le Bourget field, in quest of the trans-Atlantic glory that their countrymen, Nungesser and Coli, sought and died for.

The Yellow Bird's motor was started at 8:22 a. m. Jean Assolant was at the controls, tuning it up.

Planing had been placed beneath the heavy craft.

The Yellow Bird, with Pilot Jean Assolant at the controls, made a beautiful take off, speeding down the long, smooth stretch and taking the air just as its wheel touched the water.

WOMEN ORGANIZE TO ASK MODIFICATION OF PROHIBITION ACT

Mrs. Charles Sabin Heads Opposition To Dry Law

CHICAGO, May 29.—A nationwide organization of women who favor temperance but who are opposed to prohibition has been formed here to aid in moulding public opinion for modification of the prohibition laws.

Only the skeleton of the organization was formed at the meeting yesterday. A list of women interested in the movement, however, showed that the organization has social, political and civic leaders representing twenty-six states in the union.

Mrs. Sabin was chosen as temporary chairman of the organization which will be known as the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform.

In a statement to the press, Mrs. Sabin made clear the aims of the organization.

Primarily, she said, the movement has resulted from a questionnaire sent out three years ago by the Women's National Republican Club.

"The questionnaire was sent to over 3,000 women in all parts of the nation," Mrs. Sabin said. "The results were astonishing. Nine to one, the women favored changes in dry legislation."

"This meeting here results from agitation of long standing. Women are not satisfied with the results of prohibition. We feel that it long has been necessary that some action be taken to counteract the results of the Volstead act. This is the action, formation of a nationwide unit."

"Next fall we will hold a national convention and at that time we expect to outline policies, decide our plans of action and start an active campaign."

She said it was probable the organization would seek modification of the measure.

A number of women prominent in Chicago social and club circles have indicated approval of the movement. Several were present at the meeting.

A statement issued by the women declared that after ten years, of national prohibition, "the women of the nation are beginning to realize the deplorable effects of the operation of the law on their country and children."

FLYER STILL ALOFT IN ENDURANCE TRY

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 29.—Lieut. Herbert Fahy completed a full day in the air as he circled over southern California today in his effort to establish a new solo endurance flight record.

Fahy went up yesterday morning on his second try to break the record of thirty-four hours and fifty-nine minutes held by Martin Jensen. An attempt several days ago ended after twenty-four hours because of fog.

Meantime, a woman flier, Miss Marvel Crosson, made a claim for the altitude record for women. Miss Crosson landed yesterday asserting she had soared to 24,000 feet. The barograph of her plane has been sent to Washington for official checking.

The altitude record is 20,270 feet held by Mrs. Louise McPhetridge Thaden of Oakland.

From time to time they went aloft to wave greetings to their mates.

HOUSE PASSES NEW TARIFF BILL; NOW UP BEFORE SENATE

Few Amendments Are Made To Hoover Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The administration's new tariff bill, passed in the house yesterday by a vote of 264 to 147, was sent to the senate today by Speaker Longworth.

Republican party unity forced the measure through with adoption of fewer than 150 amendments, all sponsored by the ways and means committee. This was in line with President Hoover's requests for a limited number of rate schedule changes.

Twelve Democrats supported the bill while a handful of Republicans opposed its passage.

In the senate debate is expected to center on rates on cement, taken from the free list and given a duty of eight cents a 100 pounds; hides, also taken from the free list and levied a tariff of 10 per cent ad valorem; and plate glass which was given an upward boost.

Other controversial items in the measure include sugar, which passed the house with a five cent pound rate with a preferential duty of 2.40 cents per pound for Cuban imports; boots and shoes which were given a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem; leathers, which were given a duty of 20 1/2 per cent to 30 per cent ad valorem; and lumber, bricks, shingles, live cattle, tapioca, onions, canned tomatoes, pottery and textiles.

The bill may meet difficulties in the senate if it did not encounter in the house, where under the rules, administration leaders forced a cloture program which limited debate to committee amendments. The more liberal senate rules will allow unlimited discussion.

BILL TO ABOLISH SECRECY UP SOON

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Early consideration will be granted in the senate to the rules committee recommendation for abolition of the 150 year old rule whereby presidential nominations are considered in secret, leaders agreed today.

As drawn by the committee the new rule would provide the senate could consider nominations in public whenever a majority decides it is best to do so. The present rule requires two-thirds for open sessions. The new rule would automatically make public all roll calls taken in executive session.

The present rule requires a two-thirds majority for publication. No further action is expected to be taken by the rules committee in investigating the source of the secret roll calls carried by the United Press upon confirmation of former Secretary of Interior Roy C. West and United States Customs Judge Irvine L. Lenroot.

LINDBERGH ENJOY HONEYMOON FREE OF PRYING REPORTERS

Newlyweds Evade Scribes; Family Not Even Told

NEW YORK, May 29.—All that the world knew about the Charles A. Lindberghs today was that the couple was having a honeymoon in the western hemisphere, probably east of the Allegheny mountains and north of the Mason-Dixon line.

Nobody who was willing to give out information was even sure about that. The only persons who might be expected to know—the members of the bride's family—professed to be as mystified as the press and public.

Meanwhile, another crop of rumors was harvested, yielding much chaff and almost no grain. Unverified reports had it that the flier and Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Spencer Morrow, might be at any one of the following places:

Englewood, N. J., where they were married Monday and where they were reported to have gone shopping yesterday afternoon.

Enroute to North Haven, Me., to spend their honeymoon at the Morrow summer home. Plane, rail and water were mentioned as possible methods of transportation.

Aboard S. R. Guggenheim's yacht Tulloria.

Aboard J. P. Morgan's yacht Corsair.

At a Newark residential hotel. At the Guggenheim estate, Sea Cliff, Long Island.

Most of the rumors were investigated without result, and the situation became more complex when Mrs. Morrow's secretary issued the following statement at Englewood:

"We have not the slightest idea where Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh have gone on their honeymoon. When they left the house here in Englewood they departed without telling us where they were going. And we are as much in the dark as to where they are as is the public."

Lindbergh's Falcon biplane was taken for three flights yesterday, but on none of them was the owner at the controls. First the plane left Roosevelt Field, flew around a while and finally was brought back to the field by William Crosswell and Russell Brown, of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company. Later Crosswell and Brown took the plane to the Curtiss airport at Valley Stream, Long Island. There Randy Enslow, a friend of Lindbergh and Peter Stevenson student pilot, took over the plane and flew it to Sunnyside, N. Y.

The only definite piece of news connected with the wedding was the filing at Englewood yesterday of the marriage license. It was deposited with board of health officials by C. W. Hulst, attorney for the Morrow family, and revealed that application for the license was made by Lindbergh May 17. It was issued by John A. Manson, registrar, who went to the Morrow home by special request.

The license set forth that Lindbergh was 27 years old, the son of Charles A. and Evangeline Land Lindbergh. His occupation was given as "aeronautical consultant" and his home at St. Louis.

The bride was described as Anne Spencer Morrow, 22, daughter of Dwight W. and Elizabeth Cotter Morrow.

Elizabeth Morrow and Jay J. Morrow, sister and uncle of the bride, signed as witnesses.

MADE "LINDY" AND ANNE "WE"

Here is the Rev. Dr. William Adams Brown, Roosevelt professor of systematic theology at Union Theological Seminary, New York, who performed the ceremony that made Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Anne Morrow man and wife at the Morrow home at Englewood, N. J. The Rev. Dr. Brown did not include the word "obey" in the ceremony.

At a Newark residential hotel. At the Guggenheim estate, Sea Cliff, Long Island.

Most of the rumors were investigated without result, and the situation became more complex when Mrs. Morrow's secretary issued the following statement at Englewood:

CRIME COMMISSION PLACES CHICAGO GANGLAND "ON SPOT"

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Chicago's gangland is to go under the microscope of President Hoover's national law enforcement commission.

As the commission met today for the second of a preliminary series of organization conferences, which will map out approaches to the nationwide problem of lawlessness, Chairman George W. Wickersham outlined to the United Press his tentative program for a number of "sectional investigations." These will inquire into problems which are peculiar to certain cities or localities of those particularly acute in certain sections.

Under this program Chicago's long history of super-racket is to be examined, not only in quest of the peculiar local circumstances which have encouraged gang operations, but in search also of the legal formula for combating highly organized racketeering.

Chicago, with her abundant historical material and her bullet-scarred memorials of the nation's most sensational encounters between rival leaders, is to be the figurative laboratory case when the sub-head "gangs and their operations" is reached on the commission's agenda.

A sub-committee may be appointed to conduct this phase of the inquiry.

The commission took up its task today pledged to a searching investigation of every aspect of law enforcement and the nation's growing disrespect for laws of whatever nature. They are launched with the prayerful support of President Hoover and the fullest cooperation of the department of justice.

"No nation can long survive the failure of its citizens to respect and obey the laws which they make themselves," said President Hoover in formally inducting the commission into charging the commission with its task.

FRENCHMEN RETURN BECAUSE MAIN TANK DEVELOPS GAS LEAK

American Plane Is Stuck In Sand On Attempt To Start

OLD ORCHARD, Me., May 29.—The French monoplane Yellow Bird returned to the beach here and landed at 9:16 a. m. EST after starting on her flight to Paris.

Meanwhile the American monoplane Green Flash remained on the beach. In an attempted take off on its projected flight to Rome prior to the Yellow Bird's hop, the Green Flash became stuck in the soft sand and its right wing dipped against the beach.

Pilot Jean Assolant of the Yellow Bird explained that after a few minutes of flying a small leak had been discovered in the main gasoline tank.

Assolant believed the tank leak itself was not serious, but he said in the long run it might have proved the difference between success and failure of their flight.

The French fliers indicated that several hours would be required to repair the leak, and because of tide conditions this seemed to indicate the Yellow Bird would not be able to start its flight today.

Meanwhile mechanics examined the Green Flash to ascertain if it had been damaged when stuck in the soft sand on its false start.

It was reported the right wing, which had dipped against the sand, had not been harmed. Efforts were being made to determine whether the right wheel had been damaged.

Assolant announced definitely that he and his flying companions would make no new attempt to take off today. A delay of four or five days in the start of their hop seemed possible because of a change in tide conditions today which would make an early morning take-off difficult.

At the time the leak was discovered, the Yellow Bird was over Portland Light, about ten miles out. Before turning back, the Frenchmen dumped all of the 1100-gallon fuel supply except enough for the short return flight.

With their plane lightened to this extent, they made a perfect landing near the Jolly Hangar. Shortly afterward, the Yellow Bird was hauled back onto the planking in front of the hangar, where it had rested for several days prior to the false start.

The French crew was plainly disappointed and agitated by the trick of fate which forced them to come back after getting away to a splendid start.

First Commercial Ocean Flight Planned

Up to the present time all the trans-Atlantic flights have been made more as a test to see whether the feat were feasible than with a commercial idea. The giant Rohrbach plane, "Rostra," top, however, will take off soon from Lisbon, Portugal, on a purely commercial flight from Portugal to the United States. It is planned to carry freight and mail to a total of 2,000 pounds on the trip. There will be a crew of five, among whom Miss Mildred Johnson, right, will act as the supercargo. If the plane is successful on the route via Cape Verde and the Barbados, as shown on the map above, it is planned to maintain the service on a regular basis.

HUGE GERMAN FLYING BOAT POINTS NOSE TO AMERICA

Capable of carrying a load of 9,000 pounds 9,500 feet above the sea at a speed of 135 miles an hour, gigantic German man-made gull, the Rohrbach flying boat Rostra, has been made ready for a commercial transatlantic flight to New York. It is contemplated to take three days via the southern route from Lisbon, Portugal, with stops at Cape Verde Islands, Fernando Noronha, off Brazil, and the West Indies. RUM SMUGGLING CRAFT CAUGHT ON BRINK OF NIAGARA

Officials state it would be too hazardous a task to attempt to retrieve the boat.

FORMER XENIAN IS MARRIED IN FLORIDA

A marriage of interest to their many friends both in Xenia and Miami, was that of Miss Donna May Compton and Mr. Robert Edmund Garrett, formerly of Xenia, Ohio. The marriage took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Haight, 3505 Toledo St., Coral Gables, Thursday evening, May 22, with the Rev. Don Henshaw of the Coral Gables Congregational Church officiating. Potted palms, and coral vine combined with purple bougainvillea formed a background for the ceremony. The bride wore a chiffon dress, fashioned on beautiful lines, with two circular flounces on the skirt, combining the colors of orchid and pink. Pink crepe de chine slippers completed her costume. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and orchids.

Mrs. Walter C. Clutter was matron of honor and Miss Mary Garrett was bride's maid. Both are sisters of the bridegroom, and well known in Xenia. Their dresses were of white georgette with pink corsages. Mrs. Henry Garrett, mother of the bridegroom, wore an exquisite model of flowered georgette. Mr. Walter C. Clutter, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. Mrs. Corinne Ernst, well known pianist and soloist, sang "Oh, Promise Me."

The bride has been a resident of Miami for several years and the bridegroom is a former Xenian now of the firm of Harrison Photo Laboratories, Inc., 2330 N. W. 8th Ave., Miami.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held. The pastel color scheme of orchid and pink was carried out throughout the party rooms. The wedding cake was a miniature Plymouth Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Garrett left the following morning for a brief honeymoon trip to the west coast of Florida, after which they will reside in Coral Gables, Fla.

INSTEAD of exercise

Millions of busy men and women are keeping themselves in perfect condition nowadays because they've learned the secret of the exerciser in the vest-pocket box for a dime.

Cascarets give your bowels as much exercise as you get from an hour's hard play. They give you lasting relief from headaches, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, etc. Each time you use them, your bowels become stronger. Oils, salts and ordinary laxatives produce only mechanical or chemical action, which actually weakens the bowels.

Cascarets are made from Cascara Sagrada, which stimulates the peristaltic action and exercises the bowel muscles. Nothing else does this. That's why Cascarets are selling at the rate of 20 million boxes a year!

UNIQUE DIAGRAM EXPLAINS MARKER

A grave marker such as are being placed by graves of war veterans in Xenia and nearby cemeteries by Poody Post, American Legion, has been placed on exhibition in the window of the L. S. Barnes Co., by the Rev. W. H. Tilford, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

The marker, which has a star for its center, is placed against a background of a larger star, on which the Rev. Mr. Tilford has designated its meaning in connection with the grave marker. He has marked the topmost point "sacrifice" and the other four points are designated God, country, liberty and freedom, indicating the ideals for which the soldier fought.

The exhibition was used by the Rev. Mr. Tilford Sunday in connection with an explanatory talk to children of the Sunday School.

MADISON COUNTY IN CONTROVERSY OVER RATES FOR DOG TAX

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy, Xenia, sitting on the Madison County bench, has rendered a decision involving the legal action taken several months ago to enjoin the county from collecting the prescribed tax for dogs until the court had decided the question of whether the rates to be charged are excessive or proper.

It is held that the decision of Judge Gowdy reduces the amount of money to be figured in the setting of the dog tax only about $800 which will reduce the price of tags but slightly, if followed by county commissioners.

Commissioners have taken no official action in the matter of the dog tax for Madison County this year despite the decision of Judge Gowdy concerning the tax to be charged.

It is said that the decision of the Xenia judge, who heard the arguments in the case, still leaves the future of the dog tax controversy in doubt because of the fact no definite plan of action is outlined, except for the commissioners to set new rates, governed by certain provisions embodied in the decision.

ATTORNEY JAMES P. KYLE IS MUNICIPAL COURT CANDIDATE

Attorney James P. Kyle, Republican, son of the late C. H. Kyle, for many years Common Pleas Court judge of Greene County, filed his declaration of candidacy for the judgeship of Xenia's new municipal court with R. E. Dunkel, clerk of the election board, Tuesday.

Attorney Kyle, who has been a practicing lawyer in Xenia for the last fourteen years, is the first candidate to formally enter the race for judge of the new court.

He is a graduate of Ohio State University and for the last two years has been exalted ruler of the local Elks' Lodge.

In 1922 he was attorney for the department of adjusted compensation for the soldier's bonus at Columbus.

Attorney Kyle's entry into the race insures a contest for the judgeship inasmuch as Attorney E. Dawson Smith, Democrat, had previously announced his intention of being a candidate. They will run on a non-partisan ticket.

The new municipal court, created by an act of legislature, automatically replaces the present mayor's court and the two Xenia Town justice of the peace courts, and will start to function January 1, 1930.

ELEAZER
Miss Nellie Watkins, Xenia, spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Maude Peterson.

Mrs. W. P. Maddux, Frankfort, spent a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hartsook and her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Hartsook, who is ill.

Mr. Sol Chancellor, who is with heart trouble, is improving. Members of the Zogr Church enjoyed a social at their church, Monday evening.

GASOLINE LORECO MOTOR OIL

LORECO
Ethyl Gasoline

Good for any car. But better than straight gasoline. More power, quick pick-up. It knocks out the "knocks."

Today—the high-speed car in the hands of everybody, the hotter fuels and the big job for Motor Oils. As the high compression engine in your car rises to the crest of its power wave, explosions come faster, faster until the cool blur of speed disguises the heat of a blast furnace that rages under your hood.

Only a superior Motor Oil can hold its film intact. Loreco Motor Oils are tenacious in the face of severe test. Their low volatility makes them last longer under the greater heat of today's driving.

Also refined for today's requirements are Loreco Gasoline and Loreco Ethyl Gasoline.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE BOOK OF REMEMBRANCE—Then they that feared the Lord spoke often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for that thought upon his name.—Malachi 3:16.

WHY NOT DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT?

According to report, "Scarface Al" Capone has abdicated as czar of Chicago's underworld and accepted membership on an "executive committee" of four gangland leaders, who hereafter will administer the business affairs of the Windy City's criminal imperium in imperio. They are said to have brought to an end the costly gang war that has been raging since the St. Valentine's day massacre by a treaty negotiated recently in Atlantic City. The members of this quadrumvirate will divide the spoils of a vice, gambling and liquor business reputed to be worth $16,000,000 a year.

An alluminating provision of their pact restricts the use of machine guns in future to the executive committee, which will employ them only against violators of the agreement. This is a restriction that the Chicago police has never been able to impose. Another clause prohibits gunoting by the rank and file of the underworld's standing army. Again the police are put to shame. Apparently there have been too many casualties recently; and, anyway, a lot of irresponsible gangsters going around shooting each other looks bad for their leaders. There is also danger of some of them making the mistake Capone did, when he toted his gun into territory in which he did not enjoy protection.

The spectacle of four men sitting around a table in this supposedly civilized country and drawing up, with hands already stained with murder, a pact to regulate future killings, and to split the money taken from creatures that once were women, wrecks of the narcotics traffic and wasters that frequent gambling dens and speakeasies, would be incredible in their past records did not afford abundant proof of their cold-blooded inhumanity and contempt for the law.

What is Chicago going to do about it? The identity of these murderous vultures is public property. Will it allow them to get away with their machine guns as long as it allowed Capone to get by with his automatic? The snake of organized vice and crime that it has nursed in its bosom will continue to poison the whole body politic until its head feels the heavy heel of the law, administered as fearlessly as the gangland leaders enforce their own code.

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK.—When Mark Barron of the Theater Guild and Ward Morehouse, critic-playwright, were in London recently they witnessed a series of international bouts, in which six Britishers were knocked cold.

"What's wrong with these English fighters, anyway?" queried Ward.

"They depend too much on their navy," was the reply.

MACON WHOOPEE

Under the blazing title of "Winchell Misses It" the Macon, Ga., Telegraph editorializes: "Walter Winchell, who writes the sprightly column from New York to the right, batted somewhat less than a thousand in reporting the loves of John Gilbert. Mr. Winchell says that people are That Way, which means they are in love, and he has been giving us the impression that Greta Garbo and Gilbert were Plenty That Way; in fact, he has made Garbo-Gilberting the synonym for wooing. We had about become reconciled to seeing the notice any day of the talkie idol's engagement when he hops up with Ina Claire and elopes to Reno. Our faith in Winchell is shaken."

Well, the good of Maconitely is entitled to a snicker, at that. And this is a good time to explain that the expressions "that way" and "Garbo-Gilberting" mean two different states of unknowing; "that way" standing for being in love, and "Garbo-Gilberting" was meant to imply exactly what that starting duo revealed on the screen together—reality. We wish we could figure out a synonym as good or as euphonious. Certainly "Gilbert-Claireing" or even "Lindy-Morrowing" is second rate.

And since the Macon Telegraph brought up the subject it isn't batting 1,000 either. John and Ina haven't gone to Reno yet. They were sealed in Las Vegas.

I GET IT, I GET IT!

"Dear Winchell," writes Izzy Ellinson, "here's a soothing motto for a talkie director's desk: 'Accents will happen!'"

THE PAY-OFF

A New Yorker of excellent reputation, we hear, moved from his Park Avenue manse to another exclusive dwelling some time ago, but not before he was told to furnish several references from the "best people." The assignment took him almost an entire day searching for busy friends. He finally presented "the necessary credentials and recommendations from city officials, financiers, clergymen and reputable merchants."

Then two days after getting his lease he discovered that his next door neighbor was Mae West, who comes up for trial soon for presenting a play that was raided.

IN OTHER WORDS

Then there's the speakeasy sign over the bar on West 55th street, which reads "Hurray for Prohibition!"

AND GAMBLING GAMES

The Great Marie Futurity, a favorite sporting event with stagehands, is being held again in West 45th street. The medium of this game of chance is a cat which obviously is expecting an undetermined number of Blessed Events. Numbers 1 to 10, inclusive, are drawn by lot and paid for at the rate of a dollar a point. No. 1 costing $1, No. 2 costing $2, and so on, the total making a pool of $55. The winner is the holder of the number corresponding to the ultimate number of kittens. While it is not on record that No. 10 ever has won the pot, a propertyman named Wallen collected with No. 9 at the October, 1922, renewal of the Futurity at the New York Hippodrome, the name of the happy mother and record-setter having been Minnie.

IT COULD HAPPEN

From our Hollywood spy it is learned exactly why John Gilbert and Greta Garbo split, and why John married Ina Claire. It seems that Gilbert tipped up behind Greta one night and cooed: "Come on, baby, kiss papa." "You make me sick," groaned Greta, "always talkin' shop!"

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

MISTAKES

It's not a disgrace to admit your mistakes but it's a disgrace not to try to correct them.

SENSE AND LEARNING

It takes considerable common sense to carry much learning. Some people who are intellectual act like a man with a new watch. He's always pulling it out of his pocket and looking at it. Some folks, with learning, are constantly trying to sell themselves, to make an impression, to make a showing. A man who cannot carry what he knows, with common sense and tact, makes a worse impression than an ignorant man.

FOOLISH PRIDE

There wouldn't be so much ignorance if our pride would let us ask questions. Most of us would rather remain ignorant than show how little we know by asking questions.

FLATTERY

Flattery may buy some things for awhile. But flattery is like counterfeit money. Before long it will be found out and it will buy nothing—unless it be contempt.

THE AGE OF FOOLISHNESS

An old proverb says that while the man reigns at 20, judgment reigns at 40. Either the man who wrote that had never been 40 or he was not very honest. Some of the worst mistakes of judgment and the silliest and most irrational expressions of the will come at 40 and beyond. There is not exclusive age of foolishness. There is no remedy save watchfulness.

EDUCATE BOTH

The Chicago public school system is worthy of attention in its effort to educate both children and parents in matters of physical and mental health. Fortunately there is a growing realization on the part of the school makers in our larger cities that boys and girls must not simply be taught some facts about history, literature and science, but they must be taught as far as possible how to adjust themselves in a healthful and sane manner to a complicated world.

Relative to the Soviets I can see no reason why the present attitude of the United States toward Russia should be changed.

Personally any change in the situation or a change in the relations between the United States and the Russian government seems to me unlikely as long as the present generation is in control of affairs in Russia.

Although, in the European situation as a whole, political exigencies and not traditions still present problems the solution of which no man can foresee, tremendous strides have been made economically during the last seven years by the individual countries. On the whole I should say the economic outlook is very encouraging.

Generally speaking a most wholesome influence is being exerted by the League of Nations due to the fact that that body is creating and developing a public opinion of Europe and focusing attention upon the common problems of nations. The Kellogg peace treaty is regarded seriously and will prove an effective step in the direction of peace.

As to Anglo-American relations I can see no reason why they should not continue to be friendly. No problems exist or can arise between the two countries which cannot be solved if they are approached in a spirit of friendliness and good-will.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—As vice president, Charles G. Dawes could see it—he saw that the United States senate is obstructive, and hollered loudly for reform.

The senate's rules permit obstruction—or, rather, its lack of rules. The lower house's rules force the representatives to transact business. The lower house long ago surrendered nearly all its power to a scant half dozen of bosses. Their job is to get action, and they get it—not hesitating to club an occasional representative into good behavior, if he balks. A stuffed, parliamentary club, of course—but it can knock an unruly representative cuckoo just the same.

In the senate, each senator is his own boss. They orate and wrangle and filibuster. A stint of legislation that the representatives have finished handily, in a few days, often is squabbled over for weeks in the upper house—and then maybe is turned down, or amended until it is virtually a spoilsed.

If General Dawes had had his way, the senate would be hobbled today, just as is the lower house.

In such case the present extra session of congress would be almost ended now, as the G. O. P. managers had hoped. The prearranged program would have gone through aking— if the senate had adopted the Dawes plan, to prevent itself from acting up.

The senators, however, as will be recalled, laughed General Dawes' suggestions to scorn. They chose to remain as obstructive as ever they were—if anything, they're worse.

The result is that, as soon as the lower house was through—or thought it was—with the farm bill, the senate promptly tossed a wrench into the works. Horrid confusion instantly ensued—and prevails yet.

lower chamber then. "That was before its present rules—wholly unnecessary rules—gave a few leaders complete control over it."

"In the meantime," went on the Arkansas, "the upper house was improving."

"People speak of the 'golden age of the senate.' Why? What was permissible among senators in the 'golden age'—when men like Webster and Clay were on the national bank's payroll—would be unthinkable today."

"The direct vote for members of the upper house has done its part, for mass opinion is right in the main—at least, disinterested."

"Thus," concluded the senator, "the upper chamber of the present generation has an independence wholly lacking at the other end of the capitol building."

"The longer term makes for independence. The senate's membership is older and more experienced in point of service, on an average. Each senator represents more voters than a representative—his range is wider. And tradition—the senate's tradition of independence—counts."

"The senate's members are generally above party, as well as personal considerations."

"No wonder the 'kept' voice of special privilege howls at them."

"But take a look at the galleries. Once the representatives drew the crowds and the senate galleries were empty. Now it is the other way about. Real fighting attracts the spectators. They know it is only a sham battle in the lower house."

This menu is for two adults. The best meal is at noon. The Johnny cake makes a nice change for breakfast. Prepare the materials as much as possible the night before so that they can be quickly assembled in the morning and the cake baked while you are getting the rest of the meal.

Today's Recipes.
Creamed Spinach—To two pounds of spinach cooked, add while hot, a white sauce made of one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons flour and one cup milk. Cook hard two eggs, chop and add to the spinach. Serve hot on toast.

Ginger Bread—One-fourth cup butter, one-half cup sugar, two eggs, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup sour milk, one teaspoon ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon soda, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two cups flour. Cream butter, add sugar and well beaten eggs, molasses and sour milk. Mix and sift dry ingredients and combine with first mixture. Pour into greased and floured pans and bake in moderate oven.

COOKING RICE.
Here is the way the Indians cook rice for curries. Wash four ounces of rice and put into a pan of boiling salted water, and boil for 15 to 20 minutes. Then strain and wash under cold water, until each grain is separated, and in a cool oven, turning with a fork occasionally. A squeeze of lemon juice in the water helps to keep the rice white.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Weighing Time.

"I'm having a discouraging time with my reducing. Four years ago I reduced 30 pounds by Peterizing and could lose two pounds a day on fruit juice and one to one and one-half pounds on 800 C. Now, for three days I've had: First day, 390 C; second day, 525 C; third day, 150 C, and have lost only one-half pound. What's wrong? Is it my age—52?"

"MRS. M., it isn't your age, Mrs. M. It may be your scales, either when you first weighed or the second time. Or it is possible that your tissues are retaining water."

To get any correct conclusions about the loss of weight, you must weigh yourself on accurate scales, the same time of day in relationship to eating and elimination, and in the same weight clothes (if you weigh yourself in clothes). Furthermore, the number of calories and time of taking them the day before your weighings must be approximately the same. This last is important on account of the water balance factor.

For instance, say you weigh yourself on Saturday morning. On Friday, the day before, you had your chief meal in the middle of the day and just 100 calories of fruit or skim milk at night. The next Saturday, when you weigh yourself again, if you had the day previous perhaps the same number of calories but you took them all at night instead of noon time, you will find that you will not have had time to eliminate entirely the water that has been taken with the foods and the drinks, and this weight of the water retained may be greater than the amount of actual fat you lost. So you think you have gained over a week's time, when in reality you have lost. (However, you'll find the following day, if you should weigh yourself again, that you have lost twice as much as you expected, for the retained water is lost.)

While I'm talking about the water balance factor, I want to talk about the folly of taking cathartics for reducing. You'll find, after a good cathartic, that your weight will go down two or three pounds on account of the water and food depletion. But you'll also find that the next day, even though you diet well, it will go up again, perhaps as much as you have lost, for your tissues are now holding the water because they need it.

About water drinking. You can drink all you want to while reducing. It is not fattening. Your tissues won't hold it unless they need it. You'll find, when you are dieting well and drinking all of it you need, you will eliminate a great deal. This has given concern to some, thinking that there was something wrong with the kidneys. But it should not worry; rather the reverse, for when your own fat is being burned up for energy (as it is when you are on a reducing diet), it breaks itself up into carbon dioxide and water. The carbon dioxide is eliminated through the lungs and the water through the kidneys, largely. The more you pass, the more you can congratulate yourself. (I'm referring to the non-diabetic, of course.)

We have a pamphlet which gives instructions on how to gain and lose weight. This can be obtained by following the column rules.

Tomorrow: Answers to Mothers.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Troubled 16 waves at boy's mother says it makes her look cheap. She's also in love with a boy five years her senior and wants to know if she's too young to go with boys. Her girl friend got married and her husband bought her clothes, and mother "raves" over that. Mother is a bit old-fashioned, according to Troubled 16, but 16 doesn't want to "make her mad" so she does as she says.

Very wise, little girl. It would be well for other young ladies if they did as their mothers said. Which only proves that I'm a bit old-fashioned, doesn't it? I can't see any special objection to waving to boys, providing you know them. I wouldn't if I didn't. Of course the bride's people are supposed to furnish her trousseau, but if they couldn't and the husband wanted to—well, it was nobody's business, was it? Your mother probably felt sorry for a girl who had to go to her husband unprovided for clothes. I presume. Just be glad you have a good mother, even if she does "rave" occasionally.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a motherless girl of 18, and I'm so discouraged that I don't know what to do. When anything turns up between a girl and her boy friend it is always blamed on the girl. It's not always her fault. If a girl doesn't do what the fellow wants her to, then he gets angry and won't come to see her any more. I had a date with my friend. He was just as nice as could be. I didn't do what he wanted me to because it was wrong, and after we got home he acted so funny I was dumfounded. When something like a picnic or carnal comes up he never takes me. Almost all the fellows I know take their girl friends. Will you please tell me what to do? I love him and think that there is no one else but him."

is May, she would probably tell you that the chap was not worth wasting your affection on. A fellow who asks a girl to do something wrong and then is angry because she won't do it isn't worth worrying about. Get angry about it yourself and make up your mind to enjoy life without him. Accept the other fellows' invitations, have fun and see if life doesn't brighten up for you. If you did everything your boy friend wanted you you would lose his love in the end, anyway, so why be a doormat?

HARASSED: Sorry you have been ill, dear, and glad you are recovering. If the boy friend bothers you there is no reason to continue the friendship, although you will always be grateful for his kindness during your illness, won't you? Be as kind as you can when he speaks of marriage. Tell him that you value his friendship very much and would like to continue it, but you do not love him enough to marry him at present, and feel you are too young to promise to marry anyone. It sounds as if he was a bit spiteful, forbidding his frat brothers to go with you, but I suppose he's just a boy and felt badly that you wouldn't love him as he hoped you would.

SERVE IN PLACE OF POTATOES

Spanish Rice.
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)

Wash a cup of rice thoroughly and place it in a frying pan with four tablespoons of fat. Add five onions, chopped, and two cloves or garlic, minced fine. Let them fry ten minutes and add two cups of strained tomatoes or three ripe ones, one red pepper, chopped, two teaspoons of salt and a cup of water. Cook slowly about one hour; as the water evaporates, add more to it, to keep the rice from burning.

Peter's Adventures

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH WINTHROP

SOUND ASLEEP IN A FLYING FEATHER BED

Wild Gander heard his passenger muttering to himself, and chuckled.

"The moon is out as bright as can be, and the stars are not a speck smaller than they have been for hundreds of years. The trouble is with young Two-Legs himself. His eyes are closing and shutting things out from his sight, and he thinks that it is the moon and the stars that are playing him tricks."

"Poor little chap. I do not wonder he is weary, traveling so far and seeing so much all in one short day. I hope he rests well up there on my back so that when we reach the southern swamps he will be ready to have a jolly time with the rest of us."

Kind hearted Father Wild Gander was quite right. Peter was sound asleep on his flying feather couch, and he never saw the stars fade out, one by one, nor the moon change slowly from gold into silver.

Suddenly Peter woke up with a start. Something had happened! What was it? Where was he, anyhow? He must have tumbled into a feather bed, but how?

Slowly he sat up and his "bed" moved. Then Peter remembered. His feather bed was the top of Gander's back, and the last thing he knew the fellow had been flying at the head of the Wild Geese flock under a starlit sky. Now Gander was perfectly still. Had the bird fallen to the earth again?

Peter rose to his knees and cautiously peered out from among the feathers, half afraid of what he might see. He found himself looking straight into the eyes of Father Wild Gander, and Father Wild Gander was laughing at him. "Good morning, youngster," said he. "How are you? You ought to feel as chipper as a sparrow after such a fine long rest. I believe you slept nearly all night long."

The boy was so glad to see his friend alive and well and so cheerful that he shouted at the top of his lungs.

"Hurrah! Hurrah! I never felt better in all my life. How long have we been on the ground? I believe your stopping is what woke me up."

"Oh, no, it didn't. We Geese have all had a catnap since we awoke," laughed Gander, "while you have just this minute waked up. Look about you, boy! We are now in the southern swamps. Isn't this a beautiful spot in which to linger for a while?"

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE BOOK OF REMEMBRANCE—Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for that thought upon his name.—Malachi 3:16.

WHY NOT DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT?

According to report, "Scarface Al" Capone has abdicated as czar of Chicago's underworld and accepted membership on an "executive committee" of four gangland leaders, who hereafter will administer the business affairs of the Windy City's criminal imperium in imperio. They are said to have brought to an end the costly gang war that has been raging since the St. Valentine's day massacre by a treaty negotiated recently in Atlantic City. The members of this quadrumvirate will divide the spoils of a vice, gambling and liquor business reputed to be worth $16,000,000 a year.

An illuminating provision of their pact restricts the use of machine guns in future to the executive committee, which will employ them only against violators of the agreement. This is a restriction that the Chicago police has never been able to impose. Another clause prohibits guntoting by the rank and file of the underworld's standing army. Again the police are put to shame. Apparently there have been too many casualties recently; and, anyway, a lot of irresponsible gangsters going around shooting each other looks bad for their leaders. There is also danger of some of them making the mistake Capone did, when he toted his gun into territory in which he did not enjoy protection.

The spectacle of four men sitting around a table in this supposedly civilized country and drawing up, with hands already stained with murder, a pact to regulate future killings, and to split the money taken from creatures that once were women, wrecks of the narcotics traffic and wastrels that frequent gambling dens and speakeasies, would be incredible in their past records did not afford abundant proof of their cold-blooded inhumanity and contempt for the law.

What is Chicago going to do about it? The identity of these murderous vultures is public property. Will it allow them to get away with their machine guns as long as it allowed Capone to get by with his automatic? The snake of organized vice and crime that it has nursed in its bosom will continue to poison the whole body politic until its head feels the heavy heel of the law, administered as fearlessly as the gangland leaders enforce their own code.

Your BROADWAY And Mine

By Walter Winchell

NEW YORK—When Mark Barton of the Theater Guild and Ward Morehouse, critic-playwright, were in London recently they witnessed a series of international bouts, in which six Britishers were knocked cold.

"What's wrong with these English fighters, anyway?" queried Ward.

"They depend too much on their navy," was the reply.

MACON WHOOPEE

Under the blazing title of "Winchell Misses It" the Macon, Ga. Telegraph editorializes: "Walter Winchell, who writes the sprightly column from New York to the right, batted somewhat less than a thousand in reporting the loves of John Gilbert. Mr. Winchell says that people are in love, and he has been giving us the impression that Greta Garbo and Gilbert were plenty that way. In fact, he has made Garbo-Gilberting the synonym for wooing. We had about become reconciled to seeing the notice any day of the talkie idol's engagement when he hops up with Ina Claire and elopes to Reno. Our faith in Winchell is shaken."

Well, the shock of Maconitely is entitled to a snicker, at that. And this is a good time to explain that the expressions "that way" and "Garbo-Gilberting" mean in two different states of yoknow-what; "that way" standing for being in love, and "Garbo-Gilberting" was meant to imply exactly what that stalling duo revealed on the screen together—pashy petting. We wish we could figure out a synonym as good or as euphonious. Certainly "Gilbert-Claireing" or even "Lindy-Morrowing" is second rate.

And since the Macon Telegraph brought up the subject, it isn't batting 1,000 either. John and Ina haven't gone to Reno yet. They were sealed in Las Vegas.

I GET IT, I GET IT!

"Dear Winchell," writes Izzy Ellinson, "here's a soothing motto for a talkie director's desk: 'Accents will happen.'"

THE PAY-OFF

A New Yorker of excellent reputation, we hear, moved from his Park Avenue manse to another exclusive dwelling some time ago, but not before he was told to furnish several references from the "best people." The assignment took him almost an entire day searching for busy friends. He finally presented the necessary credentials and recommendations from city officials, financiers, clergymen and reputable merchants.

Then two days after getting his lease he discovered that his next door neighbor was Mae West, who comes up for trial soon for presenting a play that was raided.

IN OTHER WORDS

Then there's the speakeasy sign over the bar on West 55th street, which reads "Hurray for Prohibition!"

AND GAMBLING GAMES

The Great Marie Futurity, a favorite sporting event with stagehands, is being held again in West 45th street. The medium of this game of chance is a cat which obviously is expecting an underdetermined number of Blessed Events. Numbers 1 to 10, inclusive, are drawn by lot and paid for at the rate of a dollar a point. No 10 costing $1. No 2 costing $2, and so on, the total making a pool of $55. The winner is the holder of the number corresponding to the ultimate number of kittens. While it is not on record that No. 10 ever has won the pot, a propertyman named Wallen collected with No. 9 at the October, 1922, renewal of the Futurity at the New York Hippodrome, the name of the happy mother and record-setter having been Minnie.

IT COULD HAPPEN

From our Hollywood spy it is learned exactly why John Gilbert and Greta Garbo split, and why John married Ina Claire. It seems that Gilbert tipped up behind Greta one night and cooed: "Come on, baby; kiss papa." "You make me sick," growled Greta, "always talk 'papa'!"

MISTAKES

It's not a disgrace to admit your mistakes but it's a disgrace not to try to correct them.

SENSE AND LEARNING

It takes considerable common sense to carry much learning. Some people who are intellectual act like a man with a new watch. He's always pulling it out of his pocket and looking at it. Some folks, with learning, are constantly trying to sell themselves, to make an impression, to make a showing. A man who cannot carry what he knows, with common sense and tact, makes a worse impression than an ignorant man.

FOOLISH PRIDE

There wouldn't be so much ignorance if our pride would let us ask questions. Most of us would rather remain ignorant than show how little we know by asking questions.

FLATTERY

Flattery may buy some things for awhile. But flattery is like counterfeit money. Before long it will be found out and it will buy nothing—unless it be contempt.

THE AGE OF FOOLISHNESS

An old proverb says that while the will reigns at 20, judgment reigns at 40. Either the man who wrote that had never been 40 or he was not very honest. Some of the worst mistakes of judgment and the silliest and most irrational expressions of the will come at 40 and beyond. There is not exclusive age of foolishness. There is no remedy save watchfulness.

EDUCATE BOTH

The Chicago public school system is worthy of attention in its effort to educate both children and parents in matters of physical and mental health. Fortunately there is a growing realization on the part of the school makers in our larger cities that boys and girls must not simply be taught some facts about history, literature, and science, but they must be taught as far as possible how to adjust themselves in a healthful and sane manner to a complicated world.

characterized by the element of good taste. Many smart women are conservative. Many others follow fashion to its newest and most striking extremes. But the moment that either ceases to observe good taste and fitness and the circumstances under which she happens to be living, she ceases to be smart.

It takes brains to be really "smart." Not money—many women manage to be extremely smart on the tiniest of incomes, while other wealthy women ever succeed in being anything but unattractive and dowdy—even with natural beauty of face and figure. Just brains. And for this reason I feel that the trend toward smartness is ushering in a new era of personal beauty. For beauty mixed with brains is a fascinating and delightful combination. It leads to all kinds of interesting things.

Given brains—the right sort of brains, which means intelligence in using one's mind and body—any woman can be beautiful, and more than that, she can be charming.

Just now it's smart to be healthy looking. And I believe that it never again will be smart to be anything else. Gone is the day of the pale, how very delicate and feminine she languid, sickly excuse, just to prove was. Gone is the day when some women were pretty and others were plain just because they happened to be born that way.

Now all women may be attractive, because all women can be smart. Smartness is the ideal, and it is an ideal that every woman may attain if she has a normal quota of intelligence.

"Thus," concluded the senator, "the upper chamber of the present generation has an independence wholly lacking at the other end of the capitol building."

"The longer term makes for independence. The senate's membership is older and more experienced in point of service on an average. Each senator represents more voters than a representative—his range is wider. And tradition—the senate's tradition of independence—counts."

"The senate's members are generally above party, as well as personal considerations."

"No wonder the 'kept' voice of special privilege howls at them."

"But take a look at the galleries. Once the representatives drew the crowds and the senate galleries were empty. Now it is the other way about. Real fighting attracts the spectators. They know it is only a sham battle in the lower house."

This menu is for two adults. The heaviest meal is at noon. The Johnny cake makes a nice change for breakfast. Prepare the materials as much as possible the night before so that they can be quickly assembled in the morning and the cake baked while you are getting the rest of the meal.

Today's Recipes.

Creamed Spinach—To two pounds of spinach cooked, add while hot, a white sauce made of one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons flour and one cup milk. Cook hard two eggs, chop and add to the spinach. Serve hot on toast.

Ginger Bread—One-fourth cup butter, one-half cup sugar, two eggs, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup sour milk, one teaspoon ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon soda, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two cups flour. Cream butter, add sugar and well beaten eggs, molasses and sour milk. Mix and sift dry ingredients and combine with first mixture. Pour into greased and floured pans and bake in moderate oven.

SUGGESTIONS
Cooking Rice.

Here is the way the Indians cook rice for curries. Wash four ounces of rice and put into a pan of boiling salted water, and boil for 15 to 20 minutes. Then strain and wash under cold water tap until each grain is separated. Then spread on a dish, and dry in a cool oven, turning with a fork occasionally. A squeeze of lemon juice in the water helps to keep the rice white.

EDITORIAL

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Weighting Time.

"I'm having a discouraging time with my reducing. Four years ago I reduced 30 pounds by Peter's diet and could lose two pounds a day on fruit juice and one to one and one-half pounds on 800 C. Now, for three days I've had: First day, 390 C; second day, 525 C; third day, 150 C, and have lost only one-half pound. What's wrong? Is it my age—32?"

"MRS. M." It isn't your age, Mrs. M. It may be your scales, either when you first weighed or the second time. Or it is possible that your tissues are retaining water.

To get any correct conclusions about the loss of weight, you must weigh yourself on accurate scales, the same time of day in relationship to eating and elimination, and in the same weight of clothes (if you weigh yourself in clothes). Furthermore, the number of calories and time of taking them the day before your weighings must be approximately the same. This last is important on account of the water balance factor.

For instance, say you weigh yourself on Saturday morning. On Friday, the day before, you had your chief meal in the middle of the day and just 100 calories of fruit or skim milk at night. The next Saturday, when you weigh yourself again, if you had the day previous perhaps the same number of calories but you took them all at night instead of noon time, you will find that you will not have had time to eliminate entirely the water that has been taken with the foods and the drinks, and this weight of the water retained may be greater than the amount of actual fat you lost. So you think you have gained over a week's time, when in reality you have lost. (However, you'll find the following day, if you should weigh yourself again, that you have lost twice as much as you expected, for the retained water is lost.)

While I'm talking about the water balance factor, I want to talk about the folly of taking cathartics for reducing. You'll find,

after a good cathartic, that your weight will go down two or three pounds on account of the water and food depletion. But you'll also find that the next day, even though you diet well, it will go up again, perhaps as much as you have lost, for your tissues are now holding the water because they need it.

About water drinking. You can drink all you want to while reducing. It is not fattening. Your tissues won't hold it unless they need it. You'll find, when you are dieting well and drinking all of it you need, you will eliminate a great deal. This has given concern to some, thinking that there was something wrong with the kidneys. But it should not worry; rather the reverse, for when your own fat is being burned up for energy (as it is when you are on a reducing diet), it breaks itself up into carbon dioxide and water. The carbon dioxide is eliminated through the lungs and the water through the kidneys, largely. The more you pass, the more you can congratulate yourself. (I'm referring to the non-diabetic, of course.)

We have a pamphlet which gives instructions on how to gain and lose weight. This can be obtained by following the column rules.

Tomorrow: Answers to Mothers.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Troubled 16 waves at boys and her mother says it makes her look cheap. She's also in love with a boy five years her senior and wants to know if she's too young to go with boys. Her girl friend got married and her husband bought her clothes, and mother "raves" over that. Mother is a bit old-fashioned, according to Troubled 16, but 16 doesn't want to "make her mad" so she does as she says.

Very wise, little girl. It would be well for other young ladies if they did as their mothers said. Which only proves that I'm a bit old-fashioned, to, doesn't it? I can't see any special objection to waving to boys, providing you know them. I wouldn't if I didn't. Of course the bride's people are supposed to furnish her trousseau, but if they couldn't and the husband wanted to—well, it was nobody's business, was it? Your mother probably felt sorry for a girl who had to go to her husband unprovided for clothes, I presume. Just be glad you have a good mother, even if she does "rave" occasionally.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a motherless girl of 18, and I'm so discouraged that I don't know what to do. When anything turns up between a girl and her boy friend it is always blamed on the girl. It's not always her fault. If a girl doesn't do what the fellow wants her to, then he gets angry and won't come to see her any more. I had a date with my friend. He was just as nice as could be. I didn't do what he wanted me to because it was wrong, and after we got home he acted so funny I was dumfounded. When something like a picnic or carnival comes up he never takes me. Almost all the fellows I know take their girl friends. Will you please tell me what to do? I love him and think that there is no one else but him."

is May, she would probably tell you that the chap was not worth wasting your affection on. A fellow who asks a girl to do something wrong and then is angry because she won't do it isn't worth worrying about. Get angry about it yourself and make up your mind to enjoy life without him. Accept the other fellows' invitations; have a good time and see if life doesn't brighten up for you. If you did anything your boy friend wanted you to you would lose his love in the end, anyway, so why be a doormat?

HARASSED: Sorry you have been ill, dear, and glad you are recovering. If the boy friend bores you there is no reason to continue the friendship, although you will always be grateful for his kindness during your illness. Won't you? Be as kind as you can when he speaks of marriage. Tell him that you value his friendship very much and would like to continue it, but you do not love him enough to marry him at present, and feel you are too young to promise to marry anyone. It sounds as if he was a bit spiteful, forbidding his frat brothers to go with you, but I suppose he's just a boy and felt badly that you wouldn't love him as he hoped you would.

SERVE IN PLACE OF POTATOES

Spanish Rice.
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

Wash a cup of rice thoroughly and place it in a frying pan with four tablespoons of fat. Add five onions, chopped, and two cloves of garlic, minced fine. Let them fry ten minutes and add two cups of strained tomatoes or three ripe ones, one red pepper, chopped, two teaspoons of salt and a cup of water. Cook slowly about one hour; as the water evaporates, add more to it, to keep the rice from burning.

Peter's Adventures

BY FLORENCE VINCENT

SOUND ASLEEP IN A FLYING FEATHER BED

Wild Gander heard his passenger muttering to himself, and chuckled.

"The moon is out as bright as can be, and the stars are not a speck smaller than they have been for hundreds of years. The trouble is with young Two-Legs himself. His eyes are closing and shutting things out from his sight, and he thinks that it is the moon and the stars that are playing him tricks."

"Poor little chap! I do not wonder he is weary, traveling so far and seeing so much all in one short day. I hope he rests well up there on my back so that when we reach the southern swamps he will be ready to have a jolly time with the rest of us."

Kind hearted Father Wild Gander was quite right. Peter was sound asleep on his flying feather couch, and he never saw the stars fade out, one by one, nor the moon change slowly from gold into silver as the night wore away. Suddenly Peter woke up with a start. Something had happened! What was it? Where was he, anyhow? His must have tumbled into a feather bed, but how? Slowly he sat up and his "bed" moved. Then Peter remembered. His feather bed was the top of Gander's back, and the last thing he knew the fellow had been flying at the head of the Wild Geese flock under a starlit sky. Now Gander was perfectly still. Had the bird fallen to the earth again?

Peter rose to his knees and cautiously peered out from among the feathers, half afraid of what he might see. He found himself looking straight into the eyes of Father Wild Gander, and Father Wild Gander was laughing at him.

"Good morning, youngster," said he. "How are you? You ought to feel as chipper as a sparrow after such a fine long rest. I believe you slept nearly all night long."

The boy was so glad to see his friend alive and well and so cheerful that he shouted at the top of his lungs.

"Hurrah! Hurrah! I never felt better in all my life. How long have we been on the ground? I believe your stopping is what woke me up."

"Oh, no, it didn't. We Geese have all had a catnap since we awoke," laughed Gander, "while you have just this minute wakened. Look about you, boy! We are now in the southern swamps. Isn't this a beautiful spot in which to linger for a while?"

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

It may be that at the end of this season Jack Hendricks and the Cincinnati Reds will have come to a parting of the ways.

Whether Hendricks has been a failure as a leader is a matter of opinion but admittedly the Reds have been getting nowhere fast under his leadership.

Monday the Reds broke a losing streak of nine straight games but the long slump dropped the Hendricks herd into last place.

The fact has resulted in reports gaining currency that Hendricks is just about "through" as the Reds leader.

Any way, unless Cincinnati takes a sudden and unexpected brace and finishes the season in a fair position, it is altogether likely there will be a new man at the helm of the club next season.

Skipping the fact that Philadelphia has at last apparently broken the New York Yankee monopoly of the American League race and Chicago, St. Louis and Pittsburgh are engaged in a torrid three-cornered fight for the leadership of the National circuit, many fans are wondering what is the matter with the highly touted New York Giants.

Tuesday the Giants opened a series at the Polo Grounds with the Brooklyn Robins, their so-called "cousins" from the Flatbush and admirers of John J. McGraw, who had been expecting great things from the club this season, are hoping the team will take advantage of the opportunity to start that long and hard uphill climb to overhaul the leaders.

But worms have been known to turn and the downtrodden Robins may prove slippery customers.

At the start of the season the Giants were generally looked upon as the fastest and peppiest outfit in the National League. But what a disappointment was in store for those critics who picked them to battle with the Chicago Cubs for the pennant.

The Giants gave a sorry exhibition during May and only stayed out of the cellar because the Brooklyn Robins stepped in and refused to evacuate.

Wise-cracking fans have christened the Robins "cousins" of the Giants because of the accepted belief in the West that when Muggsy McGraw needs a ball game badly he arranges to play Brooklyn. Of course, that isn't the case, but in the West fans believe many things concerning the Giants.

Possibly McGraw may boost his club up among the leaders by the end of September but indications will have to be deceiving.

CONLEY IS LEADING RESERVE HITTERS; JOHNSON RUNNER UP

Although held hitless in five at-tempts last Sunday, Captain "Jug" Conley, second-sacker, continues to lead the Reserve Hitters attack with a mark of 384. Johnson is runner-up with an average of .375 while Durnbaugh, the team's leading hitter for two straight seasons, snapped out of his slump Sunday and rapped out three safeties to raise his average to .363. These are the only three regulars batting above .300.

The team batting average is only .195 but members of the team have not yet found their batting eyes, due no doubt to the inability to play regularly every Sunday because of wet weather.

However, despite the fact the Reserves have averaged only four runs and six hits for the last three games, the local nine has won two games and lost only one. Batting records follow:

SERIOUSLY BURNED BY GAS EXPLOSION

Mrs. W. W. Galloway, Cedarville, was seriously burned about the face, neck and arms Monday when the oven of a gas range exploded as she attempted to light it Monday evening.

Mrs. Galloway is at home, where she is being attended by Dr. M. I. Marsh, Cedarville physician. It is believed that a gas leak had per-mitted gas to accumulate in the oven or that the gas had been accidentally turned on, so that when she applied a match, the explosion resulted. She is the daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Galloway, Xenia.

BELIEVE IOWA WILL BE REINSTATED IN CONFERENCE GROUP

IOWA CITY, Ia., May 29.—With reinstatement negotiations already under way, the belief was expressed here today that it will be but a short time until the University of Iowa regains its membership in the Western Conference.

Suspended by the big ten faculty committee last Saturday night because of "chained athletes" charges, Iowa immediately endeavored to learn the nature of the specific charges which had brought about the action.

The investigation culminated yesterday afternoon at a meeting which Iowa faculty members and coaches attended with Major John L. Griffith big ten athletic head.

At the close of the meeting it was announced that resolutions urging the conference to reconsider its action had been passed and will be presented to the faculty committee. It was believed that Griffith had explained the charges specifically during the meeting.

Several facts led to the belief reinstatement awaits the Hawkeyes. It was pointed out that if the charges had been serious Iowa would probably have been ousted immediately instead of being allowed to complete its present scheduled contests. The "ouster" decree does not take effect until January 1, 1930, and the Iowans will be allowed to play through this year's football schedule under the order.

The plaintiff also charges gross neglect of duty. They were married November 1, 1913. The couple has six children living.

Central made a total of thirteen hits and after being held to four hits and two runs in the first five innings, put on belated rallies in the last two rounds that netted three runs on six hits in the eighth and one marker in the ninth.

Langs made twelve hits and wasted only three, scoring three runs in the second stanza, two in the fourth, one in the sixth and two in the seventh.

Neville pitched for the winners with Hurley twirling a good game for the high school. Weaver, Central first baseman, led both teams at bat with three singles. Bell, Randall, Davis and Neville each made two hits for the winners.

INSTALLING FLAGS FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Joe Bratton, member of Wallace Anderson Post, American Legion, Cedarville, is installing sidewalk flags in Cedarville, that will be used for street decorations on Memorial Day. An additional supply of fifteen flags, with staffs and sidewalk sockets, was obtained by Bratton Tuesday, which he is selling at cost as part of a program to have everyone supplied with flags for Memorial Day and other holidays. He hopes to be able to sell and install all the present supply in time for Memorial Day.

COUNTRY CLUB WILL FORMALLY OPEN WITH HOLIDAY PROGRAM

Formal opening of the Xenia Country Club for the season will be held Memorial Day with golf tournaments for both men and women being arranged for morning and afternoon of the holiday.

Following an annual custom, it is probable a men's tournament will be held in the morning and a mixed tourney in the afternoon.

Women club members are arranging for a 6 o'clock dinner at the club house instead of the usual luncheon and announcement was made Wednesday that 110 reservations for the affair have been received. Many visitors from Dayton are also expected to be present.

Mrs. C. S. Fraser is chairman of the committee in charge. Other members include Mrs. S. M. Mc-

Kay, Mrs. J. A. Chew, Mrs. C. A. Weaver, Mrs. E. H. Heathman, Mrs. T. C. Long and Mrs. Laura Alexander.

Mrs. Charles Fisher is chairman of the women's golf committee for the season and the committee promises many interesting golfing features which will be particularly attractive to the women members this summer.

Mrs. Shirley Thomas, assisted by Mrs. Dennis Tilford, will have charge of the catering at the club this year.

THIRTY THREE ARE PREPARED FOR AUTO RACES MEMORIAL DAY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 29.—While drivers determined to "make the last the fastest," thirty-three of the world's speediest automobiles were given final tests today, preparatory to beginning the annual Indianapolis motor speedway race, tomorrow.

The event will be the last in which the present tire-engined, one seated type of racing car will be used and the drivers were determined to create a new record before the advent of the two-seater type of car next year.

The present record is held by Pete De Paoli, who drove the 500 miles in 1925 at an average speed of 101.13 miles an hour. Drivers are agreed that the two seaters will not be able to approach this record.

Up to now, everything points to a new record. In qualifying trials, the drivers turned in extremely high marks. Cliff Woodbury won the pole position at the start with an average of 121.408, a mile better than Leon Dury, and four miles faster than Ralph Hepburn. The others ranged from 100 miles an hour to 115. So far, thirty-five have qualified and there were a few more who were to try today. Under automobile association rules only thirty-three the fastest—will be allowed to start.

Three veteran drivers will have the first row position (the cars start in eleven rows of three). They are Woodbury, Dury and Hepburn and the early part of the race promises to be a close fight, with Dury and Hepburn trying to take the pole from Woodbury. If Woodbury succeeds in holding the lead for a time he stands to make thousands of dollars in lap prizes, since the winner of each of the 200 laps receives $100.

Indianapolis was filled with visitors today and it was believed that a record breaking crowd approximately 150,000 would see the race.

HOME GIRLS TO SING AT WAYNESVILLE

The girls' octette of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home here will sing at the civic Memorial Day services of Waynesville at the Waynesville Cemetery Thursday afternoon, it is announced.

The group will take part in the services at the Home in the morning and the engagement in Waynesville is an annual custom. Mrs. Rose S. Byers, supervisor of music at the Home, will be in charge of the girls.

EVANGELIST WILL LAUNCH CAMPAIGN

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister, widely known evangelist, will start an interdenominational evangelistic campaign at the Opera House in Jamestown next Sunday night at 8 o'clock.

The services will continue indefinitely, being held every night except Saturday. Dr. Hofmeister is a Baptist minister and preached the ministry of healing as taught by many early denominations.

BEGIN PEN TERMS

Martin Nooks, 60, colored, and his son, John Kenneth, 30, were removed Tuesday to Ohio State Penitentiary, where they began serving terms of one to fifteen years each on convictions for burglary and larceny in connection with theft of twenty fleeces of wool from Frank Pistick, farmer, near Yellow Springs, April 30.

COSMOPOLITANS OF WITTENBERG GIVE PROGRAM FOR CLUBS

Members of the Cosmopolitan Club of Wittenberg College, Springfield, helped entertain the annual Kiwanis-Rotary dinner meeting at the Elks' Club Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock.

The Cosmopolitan Club is composed of foreign-born students at the school. Each was given three minutes in which to do his part of the program in his own style and costume.

Dr. F. K. Kruger, professor of political science at Wittenberg introduced the performers. He was born in India of German parents in the employ of the British Church.

He introduced representatives of Roumania, Greece, Palestine, Russia, Germany, England, South Africa, Canada, the Virgin Islands, China and Japan and each responded with talks or music.

The group from Germany gave several numbers. The president of the club, Miss Mary Shinowara, a native of Canada of Japanese parents gave an interesting talk of her people and customs.

Miss Ina Telberg, of Russia is not a stranger in Xenia, having been here several times and delivering addresses before different clubs and organizations. Her brother, Vladimir G. Telberg gave a splendid talk on the customs of Russia.

Hassan D. Khaldi, son of a judge of Jerusalem, Palestine gave a talk telling about the plans which he intends to carry out when he returns to his native country as a lawyer. He wishes to show his people what a good lawyer, can do he said. He also was the organizer of the fencing club at Wittenberg and showed some of his talent in fencing.

It may be that at the end of this season Jack Hendricks and the Cincinnati Reds will have come to a parting of the ways.

Whether Hendricks has been a failure as a leader is a matter of opinion but admittedly the Reds have been getting nowhere fast under his leadership.

Monday the Reds broke a losing streak of nine straight games but the long slump dropped the Hendricks head into last place.

This fact has resulted in reports gaining currency that Hendricks is just about "through" as the Reds leader.

Any way, unless Cincinnati takes a sudden and unexpected brace and finishes the season in a fair position, it is altogether likely there will be a new man at the helm of the club next season.

Skipping the fact that Philadelphia has at last apparently broken the New York Yankee monopoly of the American League race and Chicago, St. Louis and Pittsburgh are engaged in a torrid three-cornered fight for the leadership of the National circuit, many fans are wondering what is the matter with the highly touted New York Giants.

Tuesday the Giants opened a series at the Polo Grounds with the Brooklyn Robins, their so-called "cousins" from the Flatbush and admirers of John J. McGraw, who had been expecting great things from the club this season, are hoping the team will take advantage of the opportunity to start that long and hard uphill climb to overhaul the leaders.

But worms have been known to turn and the downtrodden Robins may prove slippery customers.

At the start of the season the Giants were generally looked upon as the fastest and peppiest outfit in the National League. But what a disappointment was in store for those critics who picked them to battle with the Chicago Cubs for the pennant.

The Giants gave a sorry exhibition during May and only stayed out of the cellar because the Brooklyn Robins stepped in and refused to evacuate.

Wise-cracking fans have christened the Robins cousins of the Giants because of the accepted belief in the West that when Muggsy McGraw needs a ball game badly he arranges to play Brooklyn. Of course, that isn't the case, but in the West fans believe many things concerning the Giants.

Possibly McGraw may boost his club up among the leaders by the end of September but indications will have to be deceiving.

CONLEY IS LEADING RESERVE HITTERS; JOHNSON RUNNER UP

Although held hitless in five attempts last Sunday, Captain "Jug" Conley, second-sacker, continues to lead the Reserve batting attack with a mark of 384. Johnson is runnerup with an average of .375 while Durnbaugh, the team's leading hitter for two straight seasons, snapped out of his slump Sunday and rapped out three safeties to raise his average to .363. These are the only three regulars batting above .300.

The team batting average is only .195 but members of the team have not yet found their batting eyes, due no doubt, to the inability to play regularly every Sunday because of wet weather.

However, despite the fact the Reserves have averaged only four runs and six hits for the last three games, the local nine has won two games and lost only one. Batting records follow:

Player	AB.	R.	H.	Pct.
Conley	13	2	5	.384
Johnson	8	1	3	.375

SERIOUSLY BURNED BY GAS EXPLOSION

Mrs. W. W. Galloway, Cedarville, was seriously burned about the face, neck, and arms Monday when the oven of a gas range exploded as she attempted to light it Monday evening.

Mrs. Galloway is at home, where she is being attended by Dr. M. I. Marsh, Cedarville physician. It is believed that a gas leak had permitted gas to accumulate in the oven or that the gas had been accidentally turned on, so that when she applied a match, the explosion resulted. She is the daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Galloway, Xenia.

REINDER CALF IN U. S.

BEVERLY, Mass., May 29.—What is believed to be the first reindeer calf ever born in the United States is doing nicely at Lodgepole Ranch, Otis Emerson Dunham's North Beverly estate. The young reindeer is jet black and quite long-legged.

LANGS DEFEAT CENTRAL HIGH IN NATIONAL LEAGUE CONTEST

Timely hitting enabled the Lang Chevrolet Co. softball team to establish an early lead and progress to an 8 to 6 victory over Xenia Central High's scrappy nine in a National League game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Tuesday night.

There was nothing particular at stake except the outcome of the game. The victory gives Langs a .500 rating with two games won, both at the expense of the high school, and two lost. The Buccaneers have dropped four straight contests.

Central made a total of thirteen hits and after being held to four hits and two runs in the first seven innings, put on belated rallies in the last two rounds that netted three runs on six hits in the eighth and one marker in the ninth.

Langs made twelve hits and wasted only three, scoring three runs in the second stanza, two in the fourth, one in the sixth and two in the seventh.

Neville pitched for the winners with Hurley twirling a good game for the high school. Weaver, Central first baseman, led both teams at bat with three singles. Bell, Randall, Davis and Neville each made two hits for the winners.

The Hoover and Allison Co. and Post Office nines are to hook up in an American League encounter Wednesday night. Lineups:

Oh, yes—I'm sure enough about that," exclaimed Brill. "When I came upon him down below here—"

"What! He found his way down?"

"He did."

"How?"

"I'm not certain. Someone's carelessness, perhaps. But he was a smart fellow. Do you want to hear what happened to him?"

The professor stopped again. "Are you sure you want to tell me?" he asked.

"Move on!" ordered Brill, prodding the professor in the back.

"Yes, I'm sure I want to tell you, Cunningham. You see, it's necessary for me to impress you this evening with the fact that I do things rather thoroughly. That caretaker got down below here—"

When taken into custody beneath the Pennsylvania Railroad viaduct on the Springfield-Xenia Pike, May 10 the men had five gallons of liquor in their possession, arresting officers said.

JUDGE FINES MAN ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Convicted of possessing and transporting liquor, Cabel Walls, 24, colored, Springfield, was fined $200 and costs for each offense and was committed to the County Jail in default of payment by Probate Judge S. C. Wright Tuesday afternoon.

Judge Wright, however, granted a motion for a new trial filed by his companion, Robert Ball, 27, colored, Springfield, who was found guilty of possessing liquor. A date for the second hearing has not been assigned. Ball was released on his own recognizance.

UNDERGROUND A LOVE AND MYSTERY STORY

CHAPTER XLIII

Charlie dropped flat, an instinctive maneuver which would not have saved him had Brill turned and flashed his torch backwards. But Brill, if he had the impulse to do so, refused to yield to it.

"Idiot!" snapped Brill. "God, what a scare I'd give them if I wailed!" thought Charlie, from the blackness of the ground.

Just one wail! It would almost be worth it! To send that damned little beast leaping into the air with stark terror for one glorious, triumphant instant, to hear him shriek in ghastly horror at the imagined materialization of his fiendish conception—yes, it would nearly be worth the eternal extinction that would immediately follow it!

"Nearly—but not quite. Charlie rose noiselessly to his feet. And as he did so a new idea was born in his brain. Suppose—Suppose something suddenly wailed behind him!

Boom!

"That, certainly, was the sea," murmured the professor. "There have been other sounds, however, while I have not been at work, that might better fit into your 'underground people' theory than into the theory of the waves, Brill."

"You're makingarrant nonsense," barked Brill.

"Being a fool, that is my privilege," retorted the professor, dryly. "And—to continue with my folly—are you sure it was you who scared the first caretaker away?"

"Oh, yes—I'm sure enough about that," exclaimed Brill. "When I came upon him down below here—"

"What! He found his way down?"

"He did."

"How?"

"I'm not certain. Someone's carelessness, perhaps. But he was a smart fellow. Do you want to hear what happened to him?"

The professor stopped again. "Are you sure you want to tell me?" he asked.

"Move on!" ordered Brill, prodding the professor in the back.

"Yes, I'm sure I want to tell you, Cunningham. You see, it's necessary for me to impress you this evening with the fact that I do things rather thoroughly. That caretaker got down below here—"

When taken into custody beneath the Pennsylvania Railroad viaduct on the Springfield-Xenia Pike, May 10 the men had five gallons of liquor in their possession, arresting officers said.

The professor, himself, will be Brill's next victim," groaned Charlie. "And—after him?"

Well, well—he must do something! No good standing and staring. The question was—what?

Up till now, Charlie had seen no moment when he could usefully interfere. In the first place, he was no match for Simon Brill, who probably had a revolver tucked away in one of his pockets. And, in the second place, even if he had overpowered Brill by some lucky accident, this might have removed his one chance of tracing Celia, since only Brill knew where she was. To search for her without any clue in this vast black labyrinth seemed a fruitless operation—unless one were driven to it, as a last extremity.

For a few minutes Charlie did desert the spot where Brill and Cunningham had disappeared, in a hopeless attempt to trace his companions. He found himself, however, in such a network of twisting and turning passages, where even the roof was so low that it often came down and struck him, that he soon realized the impossibility of his task, and groped his way back to his starting point. At least, he thought it was his starting point until, some way off, he heard a sound and saw the two spotlights reappear. Then he realized from his position that he was a considerable distance from where he had believed himself to be.

Brill and Cunningham had come out of the chamber. What was their next step? Their voices vibrated distinctly along the narrow spaces.

"Quick, quick!" cried Cunningham. "You know the formula now, you've got everything! Quick!"

"But there's no hurry," came Brill's voice, with irritating deliberation. "Your little contrivance isn't timed to go off until six." A key clicked. "And, with this door locked, and the key safely in my pocket, no one can now enter to alter the timing—one way or the other."

"Confound you Brill!" rasped the professor, almost dancing about in his nervousness. "I'm not thinking of that. I'm thinking of my daughter—"

"Yes, yes, I'll take you to her," interrupted Brill, "although, strictly speaking, I need not do so until I find whether this formula you meddled fellows got on my nose. I have given me as is devastating as I got away from them in their own car, and then leaving it some way up the road, came back to have a look at them and to report the theft. I can't help calling myself ingenious, Cunningham, because you know I really am! Why, I even dropped a little button in the car to sow confusion concerning the theft—a button that I got hold of by accident during my little encounter with the girl."

"And—and you mean to tell me that—that you'd have killed her?" gasped the professor.

"If necessary, yes, for the greater cause I serve. Yes, I would have killed her, Cunningham, as I will kill your daughter if you do not obey me implicitly from this moment onward—and as I killed a tramp who, with mistaken generosity, tried to intercede while I was completing the kidnapping of your daughter. And now," he added, "I think, perhaps, we really and truly understand each other at last, Cunningham?"

A door swung open, and the spotlight vanished.

Charlie stared helplessly into the blackness. A few yards in front of him, behind an unseen door, Professor Cunningham was about to conduct an experiment, and to deliver the secret of that experiment into Simon Brill's hands. The nature of the experiment

Everyone knows that Ted Lewis wears a high hat, somewhat battered in fact, because that is part of his band-leading costume but there comes proof from Hollywood that he also wears a "high hat" in the figurative sense.

Lewis and his band are appearing in the new Warner Bros. talky, "Is Everybody Happy?" which Archie Mayo is directing, and Mayo has the reputation of being a cheery megaphoner and easy to get along with.

the picture, accompanied by Ted and his band, but it seems that the Lewis tempo was such that "Penny" requested he change it to suit her style of dancing. Mr. Lewis is said to have made a forceful counter suggestion.

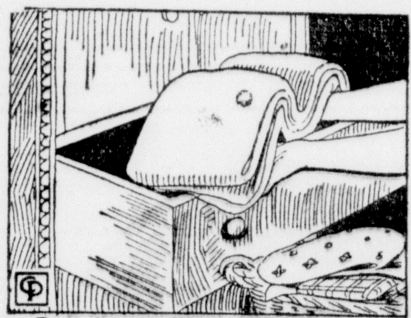

To make a short story long, Miss Pennington appealed to Archie and he deemed it only fair that "Penny" should have the music the way she wished it. Lewis took exception and Darryl Zanuck, chief of the lot, was called into the controversy. He recognized the opinion of Mayo as law and Lewis exploded and then left the set, vowing not to finish the picture. The next morning however, he showed up with the rest of the hired help and the picture is being completed.

Constance Bennett, daughter of Richard Bennett, the celebrated actor, who left a discarded husband in Paris, has arrived in Hollywood to make "This Thing Called Love" for Pathe. Connie will make two flickers before she returns to Paris to unshackle Phil Plant, her abandoned husband. Connie was a prize comer in the films before her marriage and her quick return to where she left off is something few are able to do.

Last fall there was a play on Broadway which had only two characters and now there is one, called "Courtesan", headed for the same street with only one character. Elsa Shelly, an actress who has appeared in "Vells", "Caravan" and other productions, will have the footlights all to herself. Others in the cast are merely off-stage noises, footfalls, cries in the dark or what have you. This is economical for the producer and suggests the possibilities of a play without any characters.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE WINS VICTORIES IN TWO HEALING LAWS

BOSTON, Mass., May 29.—Two laws recently enacted in widely separated parts of the United States are being hailed by Christian Scientists as victories in their efforts to have the practice of their religion, in healing the sick, exempted in all states from the regulations which apply to the practice of medicine.

One, passed at the close of the seventh congress, gives the District of Columbia a new and broadened law regulating the practice of the healing art, in which complete freedom for the practice of Christian Science is granted. The act provides that its terms shall not apply "to persons treating human ailments by prayer or spiritual means as an exercise of religious freedom." Even the requirements of examination and licensing which apply to the drugless methods of healing are not applied to those persons who practice religious healing. Except for this and a few other exceptions, the law prohibits the practice of healing without a license or legal registration.

An outstanding feature of this law is the fact that it lays down no restriction on the method to be followed by the applicant for a license to heal. All applicants are eligible for practice, provided they can prove themselves competent and trained in the particular method of healing they intend to practice.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland (D.), senator from New York and former health commissioner of New York City, sponsored the bill in the senate and followed it through until it received the presidential signature. The measure had the approval of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, the Medical Society, the Homeopathic Medical Society, the District of Columbia Osteopathic Association, the Chiropractic Society of the District of Columbia, the Washington Board of Trade, and numerous citizens' associations. It sets up a commission on licenses composed of the president of the Board of District Commissioners, the United States commissioner of education, the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia, the superintendent of schools and the health officer of the district. This commission is authorized to appoint a board of examiners.

Another recently enacted law which recognizes the distinction between medical practice and the practice of Christian Science is the new basic sciences law passed by the 1929 legislature of Arkansas, which exempts Christian Science practitioners in that state from its provisions. That this distinction has been quite generally recognized by the various state legislatures is shown by the fact that forty of the forty-eight states of this country and five of the eleven provinces of Canada have enacted such laws.

from neuritis, stomach and kidney troubles and nervousness. My entire system was run-down. No matter what I ate, gas and bloating followed. My nerves were completely shattered. My rest was frequently broken by faulty bladder actions. My limbs and arms were stiff and sore, and my back pained me. Housework was drudgery.

"Since I started with Konjola I feel like a different woman. I can eat anything, and it digests perfectly. No more gas—the more bloating. My kidneys are normal. I never have to get up at night—the back pains are gone—the stiffness has left my limbs and arms. My nerves are stronger, and I feel years younger. I gave my baby small doses of Konjola, and it improved his health wonderfully."

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gailaher Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound. I am willing to answer letters."—Mrs. GERTRUDE BUTTS, 414 S. Market St., Mt. Carmel, Pa.

Such greasy hands! Hard water won't clean them.

Hard water can't do much with greasy hands. Of course, you use lots of soap. You try to get a thick lather. But the water is too hard; it combines with the soap and forms a scum. How can you expect to clean greasy hands in that water?

There is a way. Use Melo. Sprinkle a little in the basin. Water softened with Melo makes a wonderful cleaner, with or without soap. Soft water and soap and lots of lather; grease won't stay long on your hands. Get a can of Melo at your grocer's today.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE WINS VICTORIES IN TWO HEALING LAWS

BOSTON, Mass., May 29.—Two laws recently enacted in widely separated parts of the United States are being hailed by Christian Scientists as victories in their efforts to have the practice of their religion, in healing the sick, exempted in all states from the regulations which apply to the practice of medicine.

One, passed at the close of the seventeenth congress, gives the District of Columbia a new and broadened law regulating the practice of the healing art, in which complete freedom for the practice of Christian Science is granted. The act provides that its terms shall not apply to persons treating human ailments by prayer or spiritual means as an exercise of religious freedom. Even the requirements of examination and licensing which apply to the drugless methods of healing are not applied to those persons who practice religious healing. Except for this and a few other exceptions, the law prohibits the practice of healing without a license or legal registration.

An outstanding feature of this law is the fact that it lays down no restriction on the method to be followed by the applicant for a license to heal. All applicants are eligible for practice, provided they can prove themselves competent and trained in the particular method of healing they intend to practice.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland (D.), senator from New York and former health commissioner of New York City, sponsored the bill in the senate and followed it through until it received the presidential signature. The measure had the approval of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, the Medical Society, the Homeopathic Medical Society, the District of Columbia Osteopathic Association, the Chiropractic Society of the District of Columbia, the Washington Board of Trade, and numerous citizens' associations. It sets up a commission on licenses composed of the president of the Board of District Commissioners, the United States commissioner of education, the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia, the superintendent of schools and the health officer of the district. This commission is authorized to appoint a board of examiners.

Another recently enacted law which recognizes the distinction between medical practice and the practice of Christian Science is the new basic sciences law passed by the 1929 legislature of Arkansas, which exempts Christian Science practitioners in that state from its provisions. That this distinction has been quite generally recognized by the various state legislatures is shown by the fact that forty of the forty-eight states of this country and five of the eleven provinces of Canada have enacted such laws.

from neuritis, stomach and kidney troubles and nervousness. My entire system was run-down. No matter what I ate, gas and bloating followed. My nerves were completely shattered. My rest was frequently broken by faulty bladder actions. My limbs and arms were stiff and sore, and my back pained me. Housework was a drudgery.

"Since I started with Konjola I feel like a different woman. I can eat anything, and it digests perfectly. No more gas—no more bloating. My kidneys are normal. I never have to get up at night—the back pains are gone—the stiffness has left my limbs and arms. My nerves are stronger, and I feel years younger. I gave my baby small doses of Konjola, and it improved his health wonderfully."

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.
